—like the business of Manufacturing—should be done in a practical business way. Proceeds should be put in a bank. Payments should be made by Cheque. A certain percentage of the profits should be put in a Savings Account as an emergency fund. The man who has a cash surplus in a bank, is protected against bad seasons and hard times.

MOSCOW.

Our town on Saturday, Jan. 3rd,
was the scene of one of the most prosperous days in the history of our oldest patriarchs. Our mills, carriage shops, and stores were obliged to double their staff in order to serve their many customers. Our genial liverymen also added an extra conveyance to his bus line, and the officers on the street corners were taxed to their utmost in their attempt to direct the traffic. It was the occasion when the farmers for many miles radius met in convention in the assembly room at the cheese manufacturing plant, to discuss the business of the past year, and to appoint a board of management for the coming season.
Many were present from the neighboring villages, including cheese manufacturers and makers, who payed rare compliments to those who made this model cheese factory. During the meeting discussions were led by the proprietor, the maker, the secretary and others. The auditor, when reading his report, pleased everyone when he said that from 3,171,738 pounds of milk received our maker succeeded in producing 304,891 pounds of cheese. The cheese when sold he said brought $38,560.81, out of which the patrons received $32,200.55
and the manufacturer kept for himself and family $9,047.88. The buyers claiming for short weights $312.38.
The average pounds of milk required
to make one pound of cheese was 10.4.
The average price per pound of cheese 12.64. The rate paid per 100 pounds of milk, $1.02. At the close of the meeting our secretary was tendered a hearty vote of thanks for his efficiency in discharging his duties during the past four years of office. The proprietor also thanked his hearers for their patronage, wishing that the coming season would bring with it still greater prosperity in the dairy business.

SLAYS ANOTHER'S BABE.

Demented Woman Then Fatally Poisons Herself.

TORONTO, Jan. 6. — Thought to have been suffering from a fit of homicidal mania, Mrs. Minnie Konikofe, 32, who with her husband and child occupy rooms at 58 Beverley street, slew the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Alec McFaul, the owners of the house, by giving it carbolic acid. Hurling the dying child down the stairway, the demented woman swallowed a quantity of the poison, from which she herself died in the General Hospital at 3.20 yesterday afternoon.

The only person present at the time of the tragedy was seven-year-old Johnny White, a cousin of the dead child, and his story is accepted by the police as authentic. According to him the mother had left him in charge of the baby while she went to the bank. The Konikofe and McFaul families were very intimate, consequently he did not think it strange that Mrs. Konikofe should enter the room and pick up the sleeping child from its carriage. After fondling the infant for a while, according to the lad's story, she carried it into the bathroom, forbidding the boy to follow. She locked the door, and shortly afterwards the boy says he heard a gasp.

Now thoroughly frightened, he called over the banisters: "Come quick! Mrs. Konikofe is killing our baby!" The crazed woman threw open the bath-room door and flung the child head-long down the stairs. It was picked up by other inmates of the house who rushed to the scene, but every effort at resuscitation on their part and on the part

NEW YORK, Jan. 6. — "Sir P. Whitney spent a restful day Manhattan Hotel, where he is ill for the past three weeks. He has a good portion of the time, and he had lapses, on the whole, one of the best days he has since the heart trouble showed effects."

This was the statement made last night by Dr. R. A. Pyne, the Minister of Education, who has been the Ontario Premier throughout his illness. The fact that both Dr. and Horace Wallis, the Premier's secretary, went out during the day, added to the effect of his words.

"He was his old self for to-day," remarked Dr. Pyne, cussing his chief. "He has when he is somewhat delirious on the whole, throughout the rested comfortably. I have seen cases of cardiac trouble come right. The age of the Premier, ever, is what makes his condition precarious."

When asked whether he could anticipate any approximate time for Premier's return home, Dr. Pyne refused to make any definite statement. He added, however, that he would be disappointed if Sir did not show some improvement within a few days, and he hoped to be able to accompany him to Toronto.

Besides the lapses into delirium, the distinguished patient has had of coma. Both Dr. Pyne and Dr. Man Biggs, the specialist who has been called into the case, agree while the Ontario Premier's condition is serious it is not at the present moment critical.

During the day Dr. Herman, eminent nerve specialist, said Premier's condition was "serious but not critical."

Sunday night he had short periods of delirium, alternating with periods of coma and intervals when he nuzzled those about his bedside. He awoke yesterday morning he knew where he was, and after a while understood the situation. He lapsed into a half stupor.

Hon. Dr. Pyne gave out a statement yesterday that Sir James' was the result of heart strain, nervous breakdown from overwork and that he had no organic malady.

How Much Sleep Do We Need?

How much sleep is necessary for a man? The question was asked centuries ago by Montaigne. "Tians," he wrote, "may consider whether sleep be so necessary to our life must needs depend on the nature of the man. We find that Perseus, King of Macedon, prisoner at Rome, kept from sleep, was made to but Plinius allege that some lived a long time without any sleep at all. And Herodotus reports there are nations where men do not wake by half years. And that writes the life of Epimenides, who affirmed that he slept the usual space of seven and fifty years."

was encouraging but, on the other hand, rather non-committal in his attitude as to a labor deputation which was held upon him yesterday, stating that the Government desired more information upon the points raised. The deputation requested amendment to the Lemieux Industrial Disputes Act to offset the decision of the Board of Review in the Montreal case to the effect that a discharged employee is not competent to sit upon a board under the act. He desired to make the Minister of Labor the absolute authority and to prevent the interference of courts in industrial disputes. Another request was that the fair clause in Government contracts be amended to provide a penalty for employers who violate them. With reference to the immigration act an amendment was asked to make it impossible for employers in time of labor troubles, to loan money to immigrants. Legislation was also asked to give effect to the report of the Technical Education Commission to make Dominion election day a public holiday and to abolish the deposit required of candidates, while the request was refused for an eight-hour-day on all work. An appointment of a royal commission to investigate conditions of work and coal workers in the Maritime Provinces was asked.

Why much sleep is necessary for man? The question was raised yesterday by Montaigne. "Physiologists" he wrote, "may consider sleep to be so necessary that life must needs depend on it, for indeed that Perseus, King of Libya, prisoner at Rome, being taken from sleep, was made to die; Plinius saith that some have a long time without any sleep at all. And Herodotus reporteth that the nations where men sleep awake by half years. And those who write the life of Epimenidas say that he slept the continuance of seven and fifty years."

Ancient Waterworks.

Hezekiah, king of Judah, who reigned in the years 717 to 688 B.C., was a pioneer in constructing a system of waterworks, bringing water into the city of Jerusalem. In the holy book we read: "He made the pool and conduit and brought the water into the city, stopping the upper part of Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David. And Hezekiah prospered in all his works." From the "pools of Solomon," near Bethlehem, water was conveyed to Jerusalem, a distance of six or seven miles, through a conduit of earthen pipe about ten inches in diameter. The pipe was incased within two stones, hewn out to fit it, then covered over with rough stones cemented together.

How Fouché Stood Up to Napoleon.

In his volume, "The New France," W. S. Lilly notes that Fouché was the only man who had the courage to stand up to his imperial master.

Napoleon, who, perhaps, was less of a gentleman than any man that has ever achieved greatness, took pleasure in brutally reminding him of his vote for the murder of Louis XVI. "Yes, sire," Fouché imperturbably replied, "that was the first service which I had the happiness of rendering to your majesty." On another occasion, "Duke of Otranto," the sovereign said, "I ought to have you beheaded." "Sire, that is not my opinion," was the Minister's calm reply.

Before Going Elsewhere.

"Good morning, Mr. Highprice!" greeted the friend, entering Mr. Highprice's furniture store. "I saw your ad. in the newspaper saying that you would be pleased to have your friends call in on you before going elsewhere to buy, so I thought I'd call."

"Very good!" returned the appreciative Mr. Highprice, rubbing his hands. "Now, what can I sell you?"

"Nothing. I told you I was going elsewhere."

A DISASTROUS YEAR

THE GOVERNMENT'S SINS OF COMMISSION AND OMISSION
IN 1913.

A retrospect of the year that has just ended must give very much more satisfaction to the Liberal forces than to the supporters of the Borden Government. It would be hard to find any year in the history of Canada when the Government achieved less in a concrete way for the good of the Dominion, when it had done more to jeopardize the good name of Canada at home and abroad. It would be impossible to find any year in which a newly elected Government could show such scornful unwillingness to fulfill its pre-election pledges or engage in any constructive legislation to meet changed conditions.

There has been but one real event in the political world during the year that has shown any statesmanlike effort to cope with the growing necessities of the Canadian people. That was the formulation by Sir Wilfrid Laurier of the Liberal policy of free food, with a sincere effort to discover the reasons for the increasing cost of living that steps might be taken to ease the burdens of the people. In comparison with that evidence of constructive statesmanship the temporizing and opportunism of the present government shrink into insignificance. No more striking proof of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's leadership could be imagined than the fact that the Government after time and again announcing that the cost of living demanded no investigation suddenly found popular pressure too strong, and appointed a commission—but appointed it in such a way as to insure a report to suit itself.

It has been a disastrous year for the Government. It opened with Mr. Borden's emergency in full bloom. It has closed with the emergency withered and dead, discredited alike in England, in Canada and throughout the Empire. It opened with the announced determination of Mr. Borden to force upon Canada a contribution of $235,000,000 to tide the Empire over of his leading supporters, Mr. R. B. Bennett, M. P., for Calgary, declares that unless the Premier would implement his ancient promises and give the Western Provinces control of their natural resources he would resign his seat.

There have been several by-elections during the year. They ended disastrously for the Government. The infamous Macdonald by-election scandal closed with disgrace to the Government in the confession of corruption by the man who benefited, and the voiding of his election, without the Government supporters daring to face a trial.

Despite every effort of the Conservatives, they have lost prestige in their great stronghold of Ontario. They lost South Bruce after a determined campaign, and only succeeded in retaining other seats such as East Middlesex by greatly reduced majorities. Their one victory was in Chateauguy where they succeeded in gaining the riding by such corrupt methods that after the election was protested they employed their most expert lawyers to delay the election trial so that Mr. Morris could follow the example of Mr. Morrison in Macdonald and enjoy at least one session in Parliament before the courts voided his election.

The year has witnessed the complete exposure by Mr. Bourassa, of the secret alliance between the Tory Centralizers of Ontario and the Nationalists of Quebec, by which the money of the Ontario high tariff interests were used to promote the Bourassa propaganda in Quebec, in order to defeat Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and in the end, do nothing for imperial defence.

On the other hand the year has witnessed steady progress on every side by the Liberals. Throughout the parliament session they fought successfully for the rights of the people for the rights of the Provinces, and for the rights of Canada as an autonomous nation within the Empire. It has witnessed an extraordinary revival of Liberalism throughout the country as shown by the triumphant receptions accorded Sir Wilfrid Laurier whenever he visited Ontario and the great meetings which have been held in the Western and Maritime Provinces, while the general meeting of the Ontario Reform Association was the most enthusiastic ever held.

The year 1913 has closed with the Liberal Star in the ascendant and Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his natural position as leader of the Canadian people, opening the way to tariff reform and progressive legislation for the revival of prosperity and reduction of the burdens which have so increasingly weighed upon the people during the period of Tory administration.

ments; when the government goes to such length as to interfere in the Antigonish bye-election with an improper list of public works for that district, what is to be done but expose the Government? And when the Government, led by Mr. Borden who promised a special officer to prosecute election offences in order to secure speedy justice and purity of elections, exhausts every ingenuity of the law to prevent the hearing of election protests in Macdonald, in Chateauguy and other ridings, and then deliberately enters an election protest in South Bruce in the hope of causing a saw-off to cover the Chateauguy iniquities, are the Liberals to be blamed if they insist on exposing these festering corruptions which the present Government has introduced into Canadian public life?

QU'IT AND USEFUL TREES.

Which Yield Milk, Bread and Butter, Candies and Fresh Water.

If one could gather together the products of the different food-producing trees, he could get quite a substantial meal.

For instance, in Venezuela is the cow tree, which derives its name from the fact that when the trunk is cut a stream of milk gushes out—milk of thick, creamy consistency, with a balmy fragrance. The milk flows best in the early morning and at sunset. At these times the natives come from far and near with bowls or pails to get their family supply.

Another one of nature's dairies is the butter tree tree. The name is also given to several tropical trees which yield certain oils that can be used for butter. The real butter tree grows in central Africa. From the kernels of the fruit is obtained rich butter that can be preserved for a year or more.

In order to make the meal complete, there should be bread to go with the butter, and this is provided by the bread tree, which flourishes in the islands of the Pacific. The tree is of good size, with large lobed leaves and fruit of a roundish form, from four to seven inches in diameter. This fruit, when baked, resembles bread somewhat, and is eaten by the natives as such.

A boon to the weary traveler is the traveler's tree, found in Madagascar. It will grow in the most arid desert, and no matter how dry the weather is, a quart of water always flows out when the stalk is punctured. The water is pure, clear, and pleasant to the taste. The leaves of the tree are from 10 to 15 feet in length.

In order to provide light for their darkness, the natives of the South Sea Islands make use of the candle tree. Its fruit is heart-shaped, and the seeds when boiled make tallow that is excellent for candles. The natives remove the shells, bake and string the kernels, and preserve them. Five or six of the kernels are enough to supply a good, clear light.

In Jamaica is found the so-called "life tree." If the leaves are broken from the plant they will continue to grow. Nothing but fire will destroy this tree.

A tree that loves darkness rather than the light is the "sorrowful tree," found in western India. It is so called because it weeps every morning. The tree flourishes only in the dark. Through the day and up until sunset not a flower can be seen, but after darkness has fallen, the tree becomes a mass of blossoms. At sunrise the flowers drop off in a shower, thus producing the effect of weeping. The blossoms open every night in the year.

Another kind of traveler's tree

HOME FOR SNAKES.

Poisonous Reptiles Rendered Harmless and Kept in Comfort

One hears daily of charitable individuals with plenty of time money inaugurating homes for various unfortunate types of human but the most unique establishment of its kind is certainly the Venetian Institute of San Paulo, in Brazil, a permanent and comfortable home is provided for poisonous snakes.

The institute is in a part of noted for its superabundance of venomous reptiles, where the loss from snake bites became so frequent that something had to be done. The Government to cope with the situation.

Large bands of men wearing boots, leggings and gloves for protection against the snake bites hunt the thickly grassed domain about the institute, with long, thin tubes terminating in two semi-circular claws, which controlled at the end near the body, and can be opened or closed at will. By this means they are able to grasp the snake firmly by the tail without any danger to themselves.

As soon as a snake is caught in this manner, it is unceremoniously thrust into a basket, where, to the surprise of the onlookers, it remains without a writhing, coiling mass.

too strong, and appointed a commission—but appointed it in such a way as to insure a report to suit itself.

It has been a disastrous year for the Government. It opened with Mr. Borden's emergency in full bloom. It has closed with the emergency withered and dead, discredited alike in England, in Canada and throughout the Empire. It opened with the announced determination of Mr. Borden to force upon Canada a contribution of of $35,000,000 to tide the Empire over his imagined emergency. In has closed without the slightest thing having been done by Canada to increase its own defensive forces as part of the Empire's defences. It opened with the Government boast of prosperity. It has closed with hard times and lack of employment such has not been seen in Canada since 1896 a shrinking Government revenue, and declining trade. There were two great increases, however, during the year. The Government jumped the national expenditures from $120,000,000 in the last year of Liberal Government to $250,000,000, and it has increased the National debt by millions during the last few months.

While proclaiming a large surplus, Hon. Mr. White faced a treasury emptied by ministerial extravagance, and had to go to England to borrow between thirty and forty million dollars until he became so inordinate in his demands on the London money market that the financiers there rebelled, Canadian credit became impaired, and the present Government is compelled to pay one per cent. more for money than the last Liberal Government. The Government announced that it would spend $10,000,000 on good roads. It failed to induce Parliament to accept this proposition because it was cunningly framed in the interests of the Government rather than the roads, and was an invasion of provincial rights. Since then the Government has had the mortification of seeing its Highways Aid proposition criticized in Provincial legislatures, and heartily condemned by such representative bodies as the Dominion Grange and the Western Grain Growers' Associations.

The year has seen the Government force through parliament a gift of $15,000,000 to Mackenzie and Mann, despite determined Liberal Opposition and the Government has seen that gift condemned by its own followers as well as by Liberals throughout the country. It has witnessed attacks upon the Civil Service with wholesale dismissals to make room for partisan friends. It has seen every problem which faced the Government referred to commissions, until Hon. Mr. Foster scornfully declared at a public meeting that commissions were as plentiful as berries in the wilderness and that their expensive reports were simply shelved and forgotten.

The year has witnessed the imposing upon parliament for the first time of the closure, by which the Government is able to gag the Opposition and force upon the country any legislation it pleases unless the Senate has the courage to prevent it.

The year has been especially memorable for the shameful neglect by Premier Borden of every promise he made before his election. He posed as the champion of provincial rights, but has had the mortification of seeing one meeting of the Ontario Reformatory Association was the most enthusiastic ever held.

The year 1913 has closed with the Liberal Star in the ascendant and Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his natural position as leader of the Canadian people, opening the way to tariff reform and progressive legislation for the revival of prosperity and reduction of the burdens which have so increasingly weighed upon the people during the period of Tory administration.

IS IT TO BE A "GAGGED" SESSION?

That sober Conservative organ the Montreal Gazette recently remarked that as Parliament is not to assemble till January 15th, the Government will be rather at the mercy of the Opposition in the matter of getting money to carry on the national services. Apparently the Montreal Gazette forgets that Premier Borden has prepared for exactly such a position of affairs by the adoption of the closure last session. The Gazette is probably Conservative enough not to approve of the wholesale use of the gag, especially with regard to national finances. Every Tory organ, however, during the past few days has gleefully announced that Mr. Borden intends to use the gag throughout the coming session and plans to put through his $250,000,000 of estimates and such other parliamentary business as he may have within four or four and one-half months by choking off the Opposition every time they want to know too much. To get sane Conservatism it is now necessary to go to the Liberal party.

FREE FOOD vs. DEAR LIVING.

On one shipment of food from New Zealand to Canada a customs duty of about $30,000 must be paid before it can start on its way to the Canadian consumer. Were this money left in the pockets of the ordinary working people of Canada it would be sufficient to pay the annual dues on a life insurance policy of $1,000 each for over 1,250 people. The money would be of real value to the people used in that way. Under the Borden-Rogers system it is wasted on all kinds of public extravagance designed to win elections.

Which do the Canadian consumers prefer—The Laurier policy of free food and serious efforts to reduce the cost of living or the Borden policy of high taxation and extravagance which must increase the cost of living?

EXPOSURE MEANS CURE.

LIBERALS MUST FIGHT THE ELECTION CORRUPTION OF THE ROGERS ELEMENT.

Some Conservative journals are blaming Liberal newspapers for referring to the corruption which has disgraced every bye-election since the Borden Government came to power with Hon. Robert Rogers as the "Minister of Buy-Elections." Is not such a position rather absurd? Without exposure how can there be a remedy?

When the party which obtained power with electoral purity and prompt punishment of election wrongdoing as a main plank in its platform is guilty of such crimes as promising of good roads money as a bribe in South Renfrew, the attempted Richelieu Marine Railway bribery, the Hochelaga impersonation and the Macdonald series of infamies, the Chateaugay corruption; when even a Tory faction fight such as took place in South Lanark cannot come off without each side accusing the other of using ten dollar bills as election argument, "found in western India. It is so called because it weeps every morning. The tree flourishes only in the dark. Through the day and up until sunset not a flower can be seen, but after darkness has fallen, the tree becomes a mass of blossoms. At sunrise the flowers drop off in a shower, thus producing the effect of weeping. The blossoms open every night in the year.

Another kind of traveler's tree has leaves that closely resemble the plantain. No part of it is edible, but the large leaf stalks are used for the partitions and walls of houses, and the leaves themselves for thatch roofing.

In China can be found many interesting tree growths, but most of the peculiar effects are produced by expert tree grafting. For instance, before the gates to many of the temples are evergreen trees split up from the bottom for about six feet. The two halves are then set about three feet apart, and each has the same curve to the place where they meet, thus forming a sort of arch, through which it is expected the worshiper shall pass on entering the temple.

The Chinese are very fond of braiding sprouts together, and allowing them to grow in that way. Throughout the empire many other attempted improvements on nature may be found as a result of the marvelous horticultural skill of the yellow people.

One of the strangest trees in the world is the ambash, whose wood is the lightest known, being only about two-fifths as heavy as cork. It is found in the waters of Lake Chad, in Africa, a body of water remarkable for the fact that, while it has an area of 10,000 square miles, it averages only six feet in depth.

Swordsmen of the Sea.

The swordsmen of the sea are the sawfishes, spearfishes, sailfishes, swordfishes and the narwhal, with its spirally twisted straight tusks. Sawfishes inhabit the warmer seas, while the narwhal is a creature of the Arctic. The tusk of the narwhal is hollow nearly to the point and is spirally grooved. It uses its tusk as a weapon of defense and to plunge through the ice to breathe, the narwhal being a cetacean. Sometimes when a boat has been caught in the ice great damage has been inflicted by the inquisitiveness or blundering of this great creature, that sometimes reaches a length of fifteen feet, with a tusk of from six to ten feet in length. As a rule, however, the narwhal uses its tusk for the purpose of killing fish for food. In the castle of Rosenberg the kings of Denmark have long possessed a magnificent throne made of tusks of this cetacean. These tusks are harder and whiter than ivory.

Author Who Wrote Legibly.

No author, or any one else, for that matter, could possibly have written more legibly than Francis Thompson. He wrote frequently in pencil in a careful round hand that would have put a schoolboy at the top of his writing class. His copy was always "good" for the compositor, which was fortunate, for there was always the greatest difficulty in getting him to correct the proofs of his reviews. I have the manuscript of one of his later poems, which a child of ten could read with ease, though it is written partly in ink and partly in pencil and carefully stuck together where lines have been snipped out with scissors. He was probably the only writer of genius who used penny exercise books as manuscript paper.—London Spectator.

HOME FOR SNAKES.

venomous Reptiles Rendered Harmless and Kept In Comfort.

he hears daily of charitable individuals with plenty of time and money inaugurating homes for various unfortunate types of humanity. The most unique establishment of the kind is certainly the Venom Institute of San Paulo, in Brazil, where permanent and comfortable homes are provided for poisonous snakes.

The institute is in a part of Brazil for its superabundance of venomous reptiles, where the loss of life to snake bites became so serious something had to be done by the Government to cope with the situation.

Large bands of men wearing thick leggings and gloves for protection against the snake bites daily visit the thickly grassed districts about the institute, armed with long, thin tubes terminating in semi-circular claws, which are rolled at the end nearest the snake, and can be opened or closed at will. By this means they are able to grasp the snake firmly by the tail, without any danger to themselves.

As soon as a snake is caught in this manner, it is unceremoniously thrown into a basket, where, together that are there do such very simple tricks. A dog can be tortured into doing tricks. A cat can't.

When some animals became man's slaves and others fled from him, the cat did neither. It simply took all the favors and advantages man had to offer, and refused to do one lick of work in exchange. Beat a dog and he will fawn on you. Beat a cat and it will attack you and then desert you. You can't conquer the cat. You can't make it work.—New York World.

English Weights and Measures.

Other things besides fish have their own peculiar measures. Gunpowder, raisins and butter are sold by the barrel, but the weight varies. A barrel of powder weighs 100 pounds, of raisins 112 pounds, of butter 224 pounds. You can also buy butter by the firkin of fifty-six pounds, while a firkin of soft soap is sixty-three pounds. "Stones" are not always the same. A stone of glass is five pounds; a "customary stone" is eight pounds, the "legal stone" fourteen pounds. A "fodder of lead" depends upon where you buy it. In London or Hull you will get only nineteen and a half hundredweight, in Newcastle they will give you twenty-one and a half hundredweight and in

POPPY FIELDS OF PERSIA.

Tapping the Plants to Gather the Pearl Like Drops of Juice.

Round about Shiraz, as far as Isfahan, southward to the country of the date palm, a great deal of opium is grown, and several thousand chests are shipped from Shiraz to China and various other large centers of the trade every season. The collecting of the opium juice begins in June, when, the flowers having faded and the leaves fallen, the poppy heads are ready to be bled. When the sun stands low on the western horizon the men with the tools start their work, making one or two incisions in the fleshy green skin of the heads on the side toward the setting sun. During the cool night hours the brown, strong-smelling viscous juice oozes out and collects in pearl-like drops on the surface of the seed vessel.

Before the rising sun gains sufficient power to dry or crystallize the sticky substance the gathering is in full swing. Stepping carefully from plant to plant, the men gather the opium on the broad blades of their crescent shaped collecting knives, which have an upturned back about an inch high to prevent the juice from dropping off. As soon as a knife is full it is handed to the owner of the field or his foreman, who stands among the collectors to see that none of the precious drops are hidden away by the workers to increase their daily wages. As soon as the morning work is over the fields are deserted until the afternoon, when new incisions have to be made. Each plant is tapped twice, and a large poppy head gives from twenty to thirty grains of opium.—Christian Herald.

LOOKS LIKE A SEA OF ICE.

Curious Lake of Soda In the Wilds of East Africa.

Lake Magidi, in British East Africa, is famous for its vast deposits of soda. Until recently few people have seen its shores, for it lies in the midst of a barren and waterless district, but the railway that was started a few years ago by an English company opens the way for travelers to this curious natural phenomenon. A recent visitor describes it in the London Field:

Ordinarily it looks as if it had frozen and as if snow had then fallen upon it, partially thawed and frozen again. The temperature gives the lie to this appearance of roughened ice, for the heat is extreme and at midday almost unbearable. The soda burns the feet even through a boot, and the sharp, projecting spikes, which resemble hoar frost, will pierce any except the thickest sole. After the rains there is a layer of water over the greater part of the lake, which turns a lovely pink color. By moonlight the scene is weirdly beautiful.

The lake contains at least 200,000,000 tons of crystalline substance, composed almost equally of carbonate and bicarbonate of soda. Surface and underground streams of saturated soda liquor continually feed it. The present supply of soda is enormous, and as fast as it is removed a new surface, formed from the "mother liquid" beneath, replaces it. Natives have collected soda from the same spot year after year without making the slightest difference in the abundance of the

WOMAN COULD NOT WALK

She Was So Ill—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Pentwater, Mich.—"A year ago I was very weak and the doctor said I had a serious displacement. I had backache and bearing down pains so bad that I could not sit in a chair or walk across the floor and I was in severe pain all the time. I felt discouraged as I had taken everything I could think of and was no better. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am strong and healthy."—Mrs. ALICE DARLING, R.F.D. No. 2, Box 77, Pentwater, Mich.

Read What Another Woman says: Peoria, Ill.—"I had such backaches that I could hardly stand on my feet. I would feel like crying out lots of times, and had such a heavy feeling in my right side. I had such terrible dull headaches every day and they would make me feel so drowsy and sleepy all the time, yet I could not sleep at night.

"After I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a week I began to improve. My backache was less and that heavy feeling in my side went away. I continued to take the Compound and am cured.

"You may publish this if you wish."—Miss CLARA L. GAUWITZ, R.R. No. 4, Box 62, Peoria, Ill.

Such letters prove the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for woman's ills. Why don't you try it?

WOMEN OF ABYSSINIA.

Pleasures of Vanity Make Up for a Hard Life and Few Enjoyments.

The women of Abyssinia are industrious, rising early and completing most of the household before the appearance of their husbands; they do a certain amount of work in the fields as well. They occupy an inferior position and have few enjoyments. Their condition does not, however, deprive them of the pleasures of vanity. To enhance their natural charms they dye their finger and toe nails red, and show their teeth to greater advantage by painting their gums black. The eyebrows are sharply defined by art and the breast neck and back are not unfrequently embellished by elaborate tattoo designs. Yet their appeal is primarily made to the sense of smell, and not to that of sight. Scents are highly valued and lavishly used, so that to a European the effect produced is exactly opposite to that desired. Over a richly-embroidered silk shirt, an Abyssinian woman often wears elaborate jewelry of beautiful design and workmanship. She wears elaborately finished earrings and is fond of adorning her wrists and ankles with glittering bracelets and bangles. Girls are married at the age of 14 and 15.

the institute, armed long, thin tubes terminating in semi-circular claws, which are coiled at the end nearest the snake and can be opened or closed at will. By this means they are able to grip the snake firmly by the tail, at any danger to themselves. As soon as a snake is caught in this manner, it is unceremoniously thrown into a basket, where, together with a writhing, coiling mass of its kind, it is conveyed to the home. Then, under the personal supervision of a fully qualified doctor, exactly as the surgeon in the operating room of a hospital, with long white overalls, fine rubber gloves, and so on, the snake is robbed of its poison—termed "serum"—made quite harmless. When the operation is over the snake is taken away and placed in a garden, from which escape is a matter of impossibility. Of course, it would be most cruel to leave the poor, defenceless snake in the woods again, for he would be entirely at the mercy of his kind and soon succumb. So this is the way in which almost every snake, which contains almost every kind of poison, is taken care of. Mr. Snake would find in his natural element—trees, shrubs, long grass, pools and streams where he can disport himself on warm days untroubled by the institute. Hundreds of perfectly harmless snakes of almost every kind may be seen gliding about the gardens, and can well imagine the horror of a child with no knowledge of the dangers of these reptiles.

The only single animal claims man's friendship, shares his food and hearth, obeys at will and unmolested by human haunts, and does no work in return; obeys no master and does not even serve as food for him.

The only exception to a world of slaves and of scared enemies is the little cat. The cat will not work. It will not guard your home. Its flesh is not served to man. Its one useful service is the catching of mice and rats. It kills them because it likes to; not to help out its owner. It is ample. It does not bring its prey to its owner to eat. Nor does it hunt rodents unless it happens like doing so. The cat won't work. It won't even fight unless it happens to want to and no one can punish or torture it. Learning any trick it doesn't want to learn. It is why there are almost no tricks of animal shows and why the few

Look For the Pearls.

Do you know that perhaps within a stone's throw of your suburban home pearls may be found. Sara Savage Miller has an article in Suburban Life on "Fresh Water Pearl Fishing." She says that almost every stream and pond throughout the United States contains one or more varieties of mussels in which pearls are found and tells of a carpenter of Paterson, N. J., who found a magnificent pink pearl weighing ninety-three grains in the waters of Notch Brook. It was bought by Tiffany & Co. for $1,500 and later was sold to the Empress Eugenie. Since then it has been known as the famous Queen pearl.

Show me the man whose lawn is in good condition year by year and I will show you one whose wife did well to get him.

For let me tell you, friends and fellow travelers to the tomb, there are more sticks and bones, clothespins and crooked wires upon a lawn, Horatio, than are dreamt of in our philosophy. And he that cheerfully endures the slams upon the bread basket that the lawn mower hands him when its cutters cut, possesses more than Christian fortitude—it mounts up to fiftyfold.—Eugene Wood in Everybody's Magazine.

Money Versus Lives.

The judge of a Texas county was also cashier of the town bank. One day a stranger presented a check for payment, and his evidence of identification was not satisfactory.

"Why, judge," said the man, "I've known you to sentence men to prison for life on no better evidence than this."

Pithy Summing Up.

The late Mayor Gaynor of New York, as all the world knows from his letters, was a subtle critic, and at a luncheon at the Century club, discussing a novelist who had begun well, but had degenerated into the lowest type of "best seller," Mayor Gaynor said:

"This scribbler's whole biography could be put into two questions and answered thus:

"How did he commence writing?"

"With a wealth of thought."

"And how has he continued?"

"With a thought of wealth."—Washington Star.

Upsetting the Salt Cup.

In some parts of the world, particularly in Germany, it is still believed that the upsetting of the saltcellar is the direct act of Satan—"the peace disturber." And the habit of trying to avert any catastrophe which may happen by tossing a little of the salt over the shoulder is due to the belief that by so doing one hits the invisible Satan in the eye, which temporarily, at least, prevents his doing further mischief.

Their Attachment.

"Do animals possess the sentiment of affection?" asked the school teacher of the little girl.

"Yeth, ma'am; almost always."

"Good," said the teacher, "and now," turning to a little boy, "tell me what animal has the greatest natural fondness for man."

The small boy considered carefully and finally answered, "Woman."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Birds and Cyclones.

It has been suggested that birds habitually make use of storms in traveling from one part of their range to another. It is pointed out that if a bird cannot find a shelter it must be more comfortable on the wing than on the ground during a storm, because in the fiercest gale it flies in a moving medium, like a swimmer in a strongly flowing river.—Harper's Weekly.

No Use For One.

highly valued and lavishly used, so that to a European the effect produced is exactly opposite to that desired. Over a richly-embroidered silk shirt, an Abyssinian woman often wears elaborate jewelry of beautiful design and workmanship. She wears elaborately finished earrings and is fond of adorning her wrists and ankles with glittering bracelets and bangles. Girls are married at the age of 14 and 15, being sold by their parents, who receive money or cattle in return. The marriage ceremony provides one of many welcome opportunities for feasting and drinking; and any quarrels arising from these carousals are invariably settled outside the courts of justice. In Abyssinia, like an ancient Judea, custom decrees that a man shall marry his brother's widow.

Abyssinia presents many points of interest to the students of ethnology. An ancient kingdom of established repute in the days of Homer; the home of Prester John, whose legendary personality stamped itself so deeply on the mediaeval imagination; cradle of Christianity in the heart of Africa from the fourth century onward, Abyssinia now presents the somewhat melancholy spectacle of a dying culture, while her one-time glories have vanished into something less substantial than the mirage of the desert.

The present population is mixed. Egyptian, Greeks, Jew, Portuguese, Indian, Arab and negro intermingle, and in the chaos of their conflicting interests and beliefs the old culture dies fast. In the state religion, Christianity, and in Abyssinian Mahomedanism there are many traces of pagan superstitions and practices to which some of the inhabitants are wholly given up. All of them believe in evil spirits of various forms and shapes, endowed with different powers of malignity. Some haunt dark corners by the wayside, others lurk in cemeteries; some possess their victims with madness, others inflict diseases upon them; one, particularly baneful, known as Lilith, seeks to destroy children in infancy.

The state of manners and morals in Abyssinia is as low as might be looked for in a country so long a prey to anarchy and violence. The men, however, are almost fanatically brave, although they receive no military training. In 1896, they annihilated an Italian army of invasion 20,000 strong, capturing all their heavy guns and other war material.

Locating the Bar.

A grimy looking stranger entered a hotel. "Where's the bar?" he asked of Pat, who was standing at the door. "What kind of bar?" asked the latter.

"Why, refreshment bar, of course? What do you suppose I mean?"

"Well," drawled Pat, with a twinkle, "I didn't know but you might mean a bar of soap."—London Answers.

Tennis balls can be preserved in usable shape for an indefinite length of time if they are kept absolutely dry. They lose their resiliency and become "dead" before they are worn out for the reason that dampness decomposes the rubber.—Popular Mechanics.

The Hard Knocks.

Begin the Year Well.

The pleasure of every member of the family during 1914 can be considerably increased by reading each week that greatest of all weekly papers, the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal. It has pages for everyone, old and young. It is really surprising what wonderful value on gets each week in that paper. One dollar is a small sum indeed for such a vast amount of good, clean, wholesome reading during the year. No mistake can be made in sending one dollar to The Family Herald office, Montreal, for a year's subscription. It will be the best New Year's gift to the family.

The local office of the department of Agriculture has just received the results of the acre profit competition which was conducted in this county last summer. The winner, Mr. Ross Frisken will leave for Guelph at the beginning of next week to attend the short course in stock and seed-judging at the Ontario Agricultural College, all his expenses being paid by the department.

The competition was open to the boys who took the short course in Napanee last year, and out of the forty-one students fifteen entered which made the contest a lively and spirited one. It was very successful and the results showed clearly how careful selection of seed and attentive cultivation will profitably increase the returns from the soil. The grain used last year was barley and Mr. Frisken's acre yielded 55 bus. as compared with 30 bus. which is the average over Ontario for the past five years. It must also be remembered that last year was by no means a favorable one for grain growing, owing to the lack of rain. Notwithstanding this however, his acre yielded the handsome profit of $21.30 over the cost of production which was $11.70.

The soil was clay loam and the barley followed potatoes which emphasized the value of crop rotation, that is, grain followed roots. Highest yield of barley on a soil following grain was 48 bus. This was produced on an acre of H. Wray Kayler, being the second year that this land was into barley. He had a very good return however, his profit being $17.30.

The crops were not judged entirely upon the actual returns but the plots inspected during the summer and scored as standing grain, attention being given to the uniformity, freedom from weeds and etc. The highest number of points secured in the field was 8½ out of a possible hundred; this being attained by two contestants R. Frisken and C. C. McKim. Mr. McKim had a splendid stand very uniform and free from weeds—a yield of 48½ bus. which was very good. However he put on his plot six tons of manure, a very good investment for which his plot was charged $3.00, 50c. per load and this would cut down his profit on the grain produced but would leave his land in a better condition to carry on.

The result of the competitions which were held in each county where the department has a local office have been very encouraging and the work will be continued in the future, including each year the boys, who take the school course in Agriculture under the direction of the district representatives. It is intended every summer

VERY SHORT TERM OF LIFE DICTED FOR THE NEW STE

The Toronto Daily News, Saturday January 3rd, 1914—One of the steepest opponents of the tango in the Argentine Minister, who will have none of it.

It is never danced at the Legation and one day he showed the members of an orchestra to the door for daring to play a tango air.

Senor Larreta said the tango brought to his mind "ideas really shocking."

Barred by Argentine society, the tango is danced in the Argentine, especially in Buenos Ayres," he said, "but, it is a dance confined to reputable houses and taverns of order. It is never danced in fashionable salons' or by people of refinement."

Senor Larreta explained that some people in the Argentine would allow their wives to indulge in an indelicate dance as the tango.

The national dance, the tango, is a sort of pabane, made up of a simple and complicated movement which only the tips of the feet of the dancers meet.

The Argentine Minister concluded by saying that the tango is a passing craze like the cake-walk which has nothing in common with the temperament of Europeans.

Books! Books!

James Gordon is moving into the store next to R. B. Allan's, the music dealer, on the market. He will have his usual supply of good literature, Bibles, Hymn and prayer books, mottoes, Sunday School supplies and etc., also the late Rev. A. McDonald's library at bargain prices. Give him a call.

per load and this would cut down his profit on the grain produced but would leave his land in a better condition to carry on.

The result of the competitions which were held in each county where the department has a local office have been very encouraging and the work will be continued in the future, including each year the boys, who take the school course in Agriculture under the direction of the district representatives. It is intended every summer to take up, a different crop which will be selected by the contestants and thus will be an opportunity of determining the Agricultural possibilities of the county. The plots are for the most part scattered in all directions from Adolphustown to Tamworth, and therefore would produce very good average results.

In working out the actual cost of producing these crops the following standard values are taken:—

Rent of land, $5.00; Labor, 10 cts. per hour; each horse, 10 cts. per hour; manure, 50 cts per load.

Commercial fertilizers, seed and etc. at actual cost. In valuing the returns the market prices are used. This is perhaps hard on some who through careful selection of seed and attentive cultivation have grain that is worth a great deal more than market prices for seed.

This is certainly a stimulant to the young fellows to become interested in getting the most out of the land. Last year 150 competed throughout the province and 26, the winners from each county will get the free trip to Guelph and in addition these 26 will compete for the gold watch to be presented by the Minister and Deputy Minister of Agriculture for the Province for the one standing highest in the stock and seed-judging contest.

This year's short course at Napanee will commence next week and many have already sent in their application and it is expected that there will be quite a large class. Last year it was the largest in Ontario and this year the possibilities are that Lennox and Addington may again attain that proud distinction.

NEW LINE OPENED IN JANUARY.

On January 5th, 1914, the Canadian Northern inaugurated a through fast
freight service between Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec, according to an official announcement made at the head office of the company. A limited passenger service, put on for the benefit of the people along that portion of new line between Syden-ham and Ottawa, in Ontario, is included in this statement. It is also announced that the physical connection between these points in Ontario and Quebec, with the west at Port Arthur, was established before the end of the year, and that a through freight service between Quebec City and points as far west as the Rocky Mountains can be put into force during the winter months if the necessity should arise.

Foreshadowing first the commencement of a general passenger service between all points on Canadian Northern lines in the two Eastern Provinces in the spring, and later a like through service between the east and west,
this announcement marks the first big operating consolidation of the lines of this system between the Atlantic shipping ports in the east and the big Canadian west. The next big development will come with the completion of the Pacific division now building between Edmonton and Vancouver through the Yellowhead Pass which

A PURE HEART IS A PURE FOUNTAIN

Opening of New Year Favorable
Time for Starting Right.

Pure Thoughts—Two Ways of Fighting Vice, Sin—We Must Copy God's Methods—Impurity Is Devouring Our Race—Its Ramifications—In Business, In Religion,
In Society, In Politics, In Homes.

PASTOR RUSSELL

New York, Jan.

4.—Pastor Russell, of the City
Temple Congregation, took for
his text to-day
St. Paul's words:
"Whatsoever
things are pure,
whatsoever things
are lovely, whatsoever things are
of good report;
if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Philippians 4:8.

The Pastor began by calling attention to the will. Then he showed that the heart represents the real man, whom we are not always able to recognize properly. He quoted Scripture to prove that God looks upon the heart rather than upon the outward appearance, and declared that all who desire to be pleasing to God should carefully scrutinize their own hearts. As a man thinks in his heart, the Pastor claimed, so will he gradually come to do.

The man who does not think has not properly begun to live, continued the Pastor. The man with wrong thoughts has before his mind
wrong ideals, and is still worse off.
All must admit, he declared, the truth of the Apostle's proposition that we must think upon good, honorable, just, pure, lovely things, if we would have our lives just, noble,
pure, lovely and lovable.

The Pastor did not choose this subject because his congregation is devoid of good ideals, but because we are all apt to let slip some of those noble ideals set before us in the Scriptures. The opening of the new year he considers to be a very favorable time for resetting our heart affections upon things noble,
just, pure, lovely, and for exercising all the will power and resolution we can command. Thus we make character.

Then he reminded his congregation that we are all preaching both by word and by action; and that others are influenced more by our actions than by our words. As God's people, we are all to show forth His praises as we have opportunity. Our ordination is of God through the Holy Spirit—the highest, the only authority.

The World's Purity Congress.

Last November Pastor Russell was appointed delegate to the World's Purity Congress, which met in Minneapolis, November 7th to 12th. There he met a band of noble men and women who are laying down their lives in the fight against sin in its various forms.
Some labored as Christ's followers;
others, from merely a humanitarian standpoint. But since there are only two masters, he regards all these dear people as on the Lord's side.

in the spring, and later a like through service between the east and west, this announcement marks the first big operating consolidation of the lines of this system between the Atlantic shipping ports in the east and the big Canadian west. The next big development will come with the completion of the Pacific division now building between Edmonton and Vancouver through the Yellowhead Pass which should be finished by midsummer of this year. As a matter of fact, before this section of 774 miles is finally turned over for operation, it is quite possible that the company will be providing both passenger and freight service west from Edmonton to some point in upper British Columbia, and from Port Mann and Vancouver, east to Hope and Kamloops giving the much needed transportation facilities to the districts traversed by its lines.

Apart from the interest usually displayed by the public in the throwing open of new lines of railroad to traffic, this Toronto, Ottawa and Quebec development will be closely followed because of the admitted easy gradients the Canadian Northern has been able to secure between these points. Their operation through should be a good demonstration of the advantage of modern construction as applied to steam transportation. Easy gradients make for the expeditious handling of heavy tonnage, and as this is the only direct line between Toronto, Ottawa and Quebec the operation of the new divisions will no doubt have a tendency towards the elimination of congestion between interprovincial points. The centres interested first will be Toronto, Belleville, Kingston, Brockville, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec and all intermediate points. The inauguration of the service through the west will effect all of these also, and in addition to the cities, towns and villages all along the lines to the Rocky Mountains.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Jan. 5.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the offerings today amounted to 500 cattle, 400 sheep and lambs, 1700 hogs and 100 calves.

There was no improvement in the trade in cattle today owing to the fact that packers and butchers generally have carried over fair stocks from the holiday trade; consequently the demand was very limited and the market dull. The supply was somewhat larger than expected and in excess of requirements, and an easier feeling prevailed. Prices declined 25c per 100 pounds, but even at this reduction the few buyers present showed no disposition to operate anyway freely. The demand from American buyers for stock for shipment to the United States has ceased for the present on account of the higher prices ruling.

The trade in small meats was also quiet, but the tone of the market was firm on account of the limited supply offered. Choice lots of western lambs sold at $9 to $9.25, but mixed lots of only medium quality were disposed of at $8.50 to $8.75, while ewe sheep brought $5.50 to $6 per 100 pounds. The trade in calves was slow, as the quality of the stock offered was poor. Owing to the limited supply of hogs coming forward, the undertone to the market is strong, but prices show no actual change as compared with a week ago. The demand from packers was good, and sales of selected lots were made at $9.75, and straight lots at $9.50 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars. Further supplies of hogs are expected from the Canadian Northwest later in the week, which shippers are making considerable money on, as prices here are much higher than in the Winnipeg market.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.50 to $8.75; do, medium, $6.50 to $7.50; do, common, $5.50 to $6; canners, $4.25 to $4.75; butchers' cattle, choice, cows, $7 to $7.25; do, medium, $6 to $6.50; do, bulls, $5 to $7; milkers, medium, each, $90 to $95; do, common and medium, each, $80 to $85; springers, $70 to $75.

Sheep, ewes, $5.50 to $6; bucks and culs, $5 to $5.25; lambs, $8.50 to $9.25.

Hogs, f.o.b., $9.50 to $9.75.

Calves, $3 to $15.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CAPTURING ZANZIBAR.

Serio Comic Battle That Deposed the Gay Sultan.

Zanzibar reminds every visitor of the towns described in "The Arabian Nights." It is a typical Arabian town, and there seems to be a mystery and a romance behind every door. The town was ruled for hundreds of years by a sultan until the English took charge.

There is still a sultan, who receives a salary from the English government, but some day he will be deposed.

World's Purify Congress, which met in Minneapolis, November 7th to 12th. There he met a band of noble men and women who are laying down their lives in the fight against sin in its various forms. Some labored as Christ's followers; others, from merely a humanitarian standpoint. But since there are only two masters, he regards all these dear people as on the Lord's side.

The Pastor then gave a resume of the work of the Purify Congress. The delegates discussed, not merely the evil, but rather the good and what must be accomplished that good may prevail. He was pleased with their spirit of moderation, and noted also their appreciation of what he has sought for years to set forth; namely, that apparently much of the sin and vice in the world results from ignorance and superstition, although all must agree that there are people whose vicious conduct can scarcely be characterized as other than wicked, sensual, devilish.

The Congress devoted much time to discussing the welfare of children, the Pastor declared. It was demonstrated that among the very poor ideals of chastity are practically unknown. These children possess knowledge of sex matters beyond their years; and, mingling with others in the public schools, they suggest immoral practices to those whose parents have sought carefully to maintain their purity.

The parental duty of giving children proper conceptions of the sanctity of their bodies was next discussed. This information should be given before the child enters school; for first lessons in vice are sometimes given even in the kindergarten, notwithstanding the teacher's watchful eye. The child should be assured that the parent will give further instruction later on, and should have such confidence in the parent's truthfulness that it would wait for that further information which every child's mind seeks regarding itself and its origin.

The Pastor declared that many parents do not know how to broach the subject of sex hygiene to their children. Are we to see young boys start bad habits which will injure their own health and that of their posterity? he asked. Yet great care should be exercised lest evil be encouraged, instead of guarded against.

From thirteen to fifteen seems to be the critical age when clear knowledge is quite necessary to save the child from the evil which has overtaken so many. Statistics show that boys and girls are especially subject to temptation through ignorance between the years of thirteen and eighteen. The parents, the Pastor claims, are the God-given instructors and protectors of their families. Nothing can excuse them from this duty, whether church work, slum work or even Bible study.

In a speech given before the O

Mr. N. W. Rowell made a num interesting comments on the vote of January 5th. A summa points.

1. It was a Liberal administ which was responsible for the i

2. This year's local option utility is shown by the large a

under its operation; its insuffic
by the practical impossibility of t

3. A quotation from Rt

clearly recognized that local c localities where reform is needed for where the public houses ha

Keeping a Dog.

A dog is a fine thing about the house if you are afraid of burglars and don't care anything about the neighbors. But let a vigorous dog, sleeping on the porch, scratch his neck under his metal collar and the night is disturbed by a sound that is a cross between an old fashioned clock running down and an iron rake brushing up a cement walk. The house vibrates as from a heavy train passing. Then the dog arises, turns twice and drops to the floor with a thud like the girl moving a hundred-weight of sugar about the kitchen. Housebreakers within 100 feet of the noise immediately give up any attempt on the place.

Easy Way to Kill Moles.

An excellent way to exterminate moles is as follows: Procure a small can of calcium carbide, which can be purchased from an automobile or bicycle dealer, open the hole where the mole has been digging and place some of the carbide in it. Pour two or three gallons of water into the hole and close up the opening. In about fifteen or twenty minutes open the hole and immediately ignite the gas formed. Be careful in lighting the gas. A gas lighter or a match placed in the end of a long stick should be used. The gas will burn for a few seconds and then it will back fire in the hole. There will be no more trouble from the mole.

Which He Rose to Remark.

They were at the grocery, all with recollections of many a shocking case of tremendous weather to recount, and none was left out. Then one ancient rose and said:

"In seventeen hundred an'—"

But they cut in on him there and told him they wouldn't do it if they was him, 'cause see how all-swizzlin' old it'd make him, they said. But the ancient pushed his specs up on his forehead and went right on.

"What I was goin' fer to say was," said he, "that in 1,799 cases outen 1,800 where folks remembered setch spells o' hair-raising weather there ain't a ding word of 'em go!"

4. The three-fifths handicap of 117 licenses condemned by the people this week," said Rowell, "the liquor interests require by the three-fifths requirement. Without discussing the merits of this clause, this week is a striking illustration of how it has accomplished the desired by the liquor interest it was enacted as an amendment to the local option law.

PLANTS IN SLEEP

Some Take Their Naps at Nighters During the Day.

Clover shuts its leaves before and at night, bringing two of its leaves face to face and fold third over the top. The young ones are also carefully sheltering leaves which move in the evening and wrap themselves.

There are two plants in the whose flowers sleep by day—the blooming stock and the Lychnis. The former is wither shriveled in daylight, but exhales a vanilla-like odor at night. The Lychnis is white, and in sunshine every flower closes hangs limply down.

As the sun sets this Endymion awakes expectant of the moon. drooping calyces raise themselves slowly expand their flowers. bly ceases to droop and fade, plant, which almost died by adorned anew. Its sister, the Lychnis, shines by day and is diurna, but this white one has left the beaten ancestral path and become vespertina.

As it opens small flies appear to visit it. The calyx is of that hue which they approve. The dew which attracts flies shows same dull red in its leaves. It is a rarity, but few have seen it some opened.—Scotsman.

LEARNING A LANGUAGE.

It is an Easier Task the Younger It is Taken In Hand.

The time to learn a language is when you are young, the younger the better. We learn our own language as children. The older we grow the harder, it is, because it means not merely learning by heart a great many words, not merely training the palate and tongue to produce different sounds, but adopting a new attitude of mind.

Nothing definite has been discovered as to the localization of faculties in the brain, therefore nothing certain is known, but it has always seemed to me and to others whom I have consulted that when you learn a new language you are exercising and developing a new piece of brain.

When you know several languages and change from one to another you seem definitely to change the piece of brain which actuates your tongue.
You switch of one center and switch
on to another.

You will always notice in yourself and others that there is a definite pause when the change of language is made. Now it becomes every year more difficult to awaken an unused part of the brain and bring it into active use, and to begin at twenty-three is late.—Atlantic.

FIRST POSTAL TRAIN.

It Was Tried In 1864 and Proved a Thorough Success.

The first trial of a postal car service,
in which mail matter is assorted while in transit, was made in 1864 on the Chicago and Northwestern railway.
The scheme was a thorough success,
and railway mail service was inaugurated that year on several of the important railway lines and was gradually extended all over the United States and adopted by other countries.

In 1874 the American railway mail system was thoroughly organized on a permanent basis, with eight territorial divisions, each in charge of a superintendent subordinate to a general chief at Washington.

This service was among the first to adopt a modern classified civil service.
Appointment of railway mail clerks having always been made for a probationary period, permanent employment being conditioned on satisfactory service and conduct and removal based on good cause only. The service has been gradually increased and new divisions organized and is now operated on practically every railway.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Subtle Advertising.

A successful hotel manager pointed to the advertisement of a hotel at a fashionable resort. The advertisement read:

"Special rates to single men."
"The proprietor of that hotel," said he, "deserves to succeed. He lays in his advertisement a subtle trap for mothers with marriageable daughters.
They read the advertisement and they conclude that, given lower rates at this hotel, single men will be plentiful.
They therefore decide that there is the place undoubtedly to take their daughters."

Then, laughing, he concluded:

lieve that as far as their daughters'
chances of matrimony are concerned

PROLOGUE.

Here's a tale of the sea and the treasure isle, of long hid gems and bad men's guile, of perils on land and wave well met, spite storm and mutiny's awful threat.

The way of a man with a maid is told as they voyage the seas in quest of gold—the man so brave and the maid so fair. For her sake naught he will not dare.

From English fields to south sea shore their path they follow while billows roar, but it leads them safe to their goal at last, with their love and their treasure tightly clasped.

CHAPTER I.

Wherein I Bait the Duke Over the Dead.

I CANNOT say that I was greatly surprised when I stumbled across the body of Sir Geoffrey in the spinney, which is not for a moment meant to convey the impression that I was not shocked. I had expected that Sir Geoffrey would come to some such sad end; therefore I say that I was not surprised. But as I stood over him in the gray dawn, looking down upon him lying so quietly on his back with the handsome, silver mounted, ivory handled dueling pistol which had done the damage still clasped in his right hand I was fascinated with horror.

Sir Geoffrey had carefully put his bullet through his heart. It was less disfiguring and brutal, less hard on

you. And after all's said and done, Wilberforce was a gentleman, a good player and a gallant loser."

"Exactly, and he lost his all like a gentleman."

"And you got it, at least most of it." "Patience, my friend; you had your share."

"I don't know but I would give it back to have poor old Geoff with us once again," said Luftdon, with some heat.

"That is a perfectly foolish statement, my buck," returned the other. "Somebody was bound to get it. Wilberforce has been going the pace for years. We happened to be in at the death, that's all."

"Well, how does it relieve you, then? Do you think Wilberforce would have attempted to get you to support him?"

The drawler laughed.

"Of course not. This"—he pointed to the dead body—"is proof enough of the spirit that was in him. But, of course, I cannot marry the girl now."

"You can't?"

"Certainly not. Her father a bankrupt, a suicide—"

"But the castle and this park?"

"Mortgaged up to the hilt. Speaking of hilts"—he stooped down and, daintily avoiding contact with the corpse, drew from the scabbard the diamond hilted sword—"this belongs to me. It's worth taking. You remember he staked it last night on the last deal."

"Good God, man," protested the first speaker, "don't take the man's sword away! Let him lie with his weapons like a gentleman."

"Tut, tut! You grow scrupulous, it seems. We will provide a cheaper bedon of his knighthood, if necessary."

You are doubtless some servant of the house!"

"I am no man's servant," I interrupted in some heat.

"Somebody born on the sea—who probably cherishes a yoke of admiration for the lady of the house."

I flushed like a girl at this. I never was good at the dissimulation that goes on in polite society.

"Tell her, my man, tell her," he cried, "tell her that she is a beggar and her father a suicide and that I have all her property without her. She can go to your arms. She is not meet for the Duke of Arcester."

So this was Arcester! I had heard of him, as I had of Luftdon, two of the most debauched, unprincipled rakes, idlers, fortune hunters, gamblers, men about town, in all England. I stepped closer to him and struck him with the palm of my hand. His sword was out on the moment, but before he could make a pass I wrenched it from him, broke the blade over my knee and buried the two pieces into the copple.

"I can match you with swords," said I. "I have fought with men, not popinjays in my day all over the world, and I know the use of the weapon, but I would not demean myself, being an honest man though no gentleman, by crossing blades with such a ruffian."

"By God," cried the man, "I will have you flung into the mill pond. I will clap you in jail. I will!"

"You will do nothing of the sort," said I. "There is no man on the estate who would not take my part against yours, especially when I repeat what you have said about Mistress Lucy."

"And who would believe you?" queried the duke, whose anger was at a frightful height in being thus braved

"Hampdon, you may not be a man," said Luftdon, "but by God he is a man, and here is his hand. He had played a man's part clasped it."

And so they went down the leaving me not greatly relishing triumph, for I had to tell M. Lucy all that had happened.

The scarlet of my lady's riding as she galloped up the tree road attracted my attention. I ended my pace, and we arrived steps of the hall at the same time. She was alone, for she had even chosen to ride unaccompanied.

I stood silent before her with curious dumbness. I generally once when first entering her presence while she drew rein sharply. She a little thing compared to me—a small woman, but in one sense she was the biggest thing I had ever confronted. I was almost afraid of her! I whed nothing else. What she thought me was of little moment to her.

It was Mistress Lucy's regular to take a morning gallop every day was that usual custom that caused to look so fresh and young and tiful, that put the color in her and the sparkle in her eye.

She nodded carelessly, yet kindly. It was her habit, that kindness. When she was a little and I had been a great boy we played together familiarly, but was long since over. Then she about for a groom. The steps to the terrace were deserted. Sir frey of late had grown slack in administration of affairs on account of his troubles, and no one was Mistress Lucy stared at me, frow

CHAPTER II.

Wherein I Break the News

"MASTER HAMPDON," Mistress Lucy at last, nobody else seems about, suppose you at the task."

She loosed her little foot from stirrup and thrust it out toward I am nothing of a horseman. very early sent to sea, and I a sailor's awkwardness with I. Naturally, I did not know how should be dismounted. I stepped to her, seized her about the waist both hands, lifted her bodily from saddle and set her down gently gravel. She looked at me very queerly and gave a faint shriek as her came upon my arms. Indeed, I no doubt that I held her tightly.

"I dare say there is not a among my father's friends or who could have done that. I Hampdon," said she smiling and looking flushed and excited.

"'Tis no great feat," said I stoutly enough. "I have lifted bigger."

"Women!" flashed out Mistress slightly frowning up at me.

"Things," I replied.

"It amazes me," she said. "I never been dismounted that way before. However, you always stronger than most men, even boy. There seems to be no about. The place is wretchedly ed. Will you take my horse to the stables?" she asked me.

There was a certain flattery in that request. If I had not her how strong I was in all probabilities she would have thrown me the and, with a nod toward the stables and insulted. In his agitation he tore at his neck cloth. "'Twould be your word against mine, and"—

"For the matter of that, my word

down upon him lying so quietly on his back with the handsome, silver mounted, ivory handled dueling pistol which had done the damage still clasped in his right hand I was fascinated with horror.

Sir Geoffrey had carefully put his bullet through his heart. It was less disfiguring and brutal, less hard on those left behind, less troublesome, more gentlemanly. His sword lay underneath him, the diamond hilt protruding.

I guess that he was glad enough, after all, that the end had come, for there was not that look of pain or horror or fear which I have so often seen on the faces of the dead, but his features were calm and composed. He had not been dead long. As I bent over him I noticed that he had something in his left hand. A nearer look showed it to be an envelope. I drew it away and saw that it was addressed to Mistress Lucy. Thrusting it in the pocket of my coat, I rose to my feet.

At that instant I heard steps and voices. Now I had nothing on earth to fear from anybody. The death of Sir Geoffrey was too obviously a suicide for any one to accuse me even if there had been any reason on earth for bringing me under suspicion. The letter which I carried in my pocket addressed to Mistress Lucy would undoubtedly explain everything there was to explain. Something, however, moved me to seek concealment. I am a sailor, as you will find out, and can act quickly in an emergency by a sort of instinct.

Sir Geoffrey lay on the side of the path through the spinney, and beyond him the coppice thickened. The path twisted and turned. From the sound of the footsteps I judged that men were coming along it. I instantly stepped across the body and concealed myself behind a tree trunk in the leafy foliage of the undergrowth. I could see without being seen and hear as well.

I did not expect that any of the guests of the castle would make their appearance at that hour. The footsteps stopped. Two men, one of whom had been pointed out to me as Baron Luftdon, in the lead, followed by another who was strange to me, suddenly appeared. A voice which I recognized as Luftdon's at once exclaimed in awestruck tones:

"By gad, he's done it! Here's a pretty affair!"

"Oh, I don't know," said the second; "it might be worse!"

"Worse for him? Great heavens, man, he's dead!"

"Worse for us."

"What d'ye mean? I don't understand."

"He might have shot himself before we plucked him."

"Oh, I see!"

The two stepped a little nearer. The first speaker, Lord Luftdon, one of the young bloods who had been having high carouse with Sir Geoffrey for the past week at the castle, bent over him.

"Well," continued the drawler nonchalantly—as for me, I hated them both, but the latter speaker the more, if possible, for reasons which you will presently understand—"this relieves me greatly."

"What do you mean? After such a night as we had to come upon—this is enough to unsettle any man."

"Pooh, pooh, man; you're nervous!"

"Well, I don't know how it relieves me. It's worth taking. You remember he staked it last night on the last deal."

"Good God, man," protested the first speaker, "don't take the man's sword away! Let him lie with his weapons like a gentleman."

"Tut, tut! You grow scrupulous, it seems. We will provide a cheaper badge of his knighthood, if necessary."

"And about the girl?"

"'Tis all off."

"You will have some trouble breaking your engagement with her, I am thinking."

"Not I. To do her justice, the girl has the spirit of her father. A whisper that I am disinclined to the match will be sufficient."

"Aye, but who will give her that whisper?"

"We will arrange that some way. Truth to tell, I am rather tired of the mix. She bores me with her high airs. She does not know that she is penniless and disgraced. And as for her good looks, 'tis a country beauty, after all."

"Poor girl!" began Luftdon, whose face, though bloated and flushed, still showed some signs of human kindness.

At that point I intervened. I could bear no more. When they spoke so slightly of my mistress it was more than I could stand. I burst out of the brush and stood before them—mad, enraged and through. I will admit that I lacked the composure and breeding of these precious two. They started back at my sudden appearance, from which he of the slow speech speedily recovered.

"Now, who may you be, and what may you want?" he said.

"Who I am matters nothing," said I, "but what I want matters a great deal."

"Ah! And what is it that you want that matters so?"

"In the first place that sword."

"This?" said the man, holding Sir Geoffrey's handsome weapon up lightly by the blade.

"That," said I.

I am accustomed to move quickly as well as to think quickly, and before he knew it I had it by the hilt, and but that he released the blade instantly I would have cut his hand as I withdrew it. He swung round and clapped his hand on his own sword, a fierce oath breaking from his lips, his face black as thunder.

"Don't draw that little spit," I said, "or I will be under the necessity of breaking your back."

I towered above both of them and I have no doubt that I could have made good my boast. The man had the courage of his race and station. He faced me undaunted, his hand on his sword hilt.

"Would you rob me of mine own?" he asked calmly.

"I might do so, and with justice," I replied. "You had no hesitation in robbing the living or the dead."

"Zounds!" cried the first man, "it was in fair play; we risked each what we had, and Sir Geoffrey lost."

"Yes; I see," I replied. "Having paid with everything else, he had to throw away his life. I heard what you said. You wonder how Mistress Wilberforce is to learn the situation. You wonder who is to tell her. I will."

"That is good; well thought of," said the drawler with amazing assurance. "I could no have wished it better."

"Don't draw that little spit."

and insulted. In his agitation he tore at his neck cloth. "I would be your word against mine, and"—

"For the matter of that, my word will not be uncorroborated," I interrupted swiftly.

"What do you mean?"

"This gentleman"—

"By gad," said Lord Luftdon, "you are right to appeal to me and you were right to strike Arcester. I'm sorry for the girl and for Sir Geoffrey and ashamed for my friend."

"Would you turn against me in this?" cried the duke.

"I certainly would."

"God," whispered his grace hotly, fumbling at the empty sheath, "I wish I had my sword!"

"There is Sir Geoffrey's sword," said Lord Luftdon, who did not lack courage, clutching his own blade as he spoke and making as if to draw it.

"No," said I, master of the situation as I meant to be, "there will be no more fighting over the dead body of Sir Geoffrey. You and Lord Luftdon can settle your differences elsewhere."

"On second thought, there will be no further settlement," said Luftdon, regaining his coolness and thrusting back into its scabbard his half drawn blade. "His grace and I are in too many things to make a permanent difference between us possible."

"I thought so," I replied.

"By gad," laughed Luftdon, "I like your spirit, lad! Who are you and what are you?"

"The late gardener's son."

"Do they breed such as you down here in these gardens?"

"As to that I know not, my lord. I am a sailor. I have commanded my own ship and made my own fortune. I come back here between cruises because I am devoted to"—

"The woman!" sneered the duke. And I marveled at the temerity of the man, seeing that I could have choked him to death with one hand.

"Mention her name again," I cried, "and you will lie beside your victim yonder!"

"Right!" said Luftdon approvingly.

"I come back here because I am fond of the old place; it is my home. My people have served the Wilberforces for generations. Their forbears and mine lie together in the churchyard around the hill yonder. You can't understand devotion like that," said I, turning to the duke, "and it is not necessary that you should."

"And indeed what is necessary for me, pray?" he sneered.

"That you leave the place at once."

"Without speech with my lady?"

"Without speech with any one. There is a good inn at the village. I will take it upon myself to see that your servants pack your mails and follow you there at once."

"I will not be ordered about like this," protested the duke.

"Oh, yes, you will," said Luftdon.

"The advice he gives is good. We have nothing more to do here. Don't be a fool, Arcester. You have got everything you wanted in this game, and it is only just that you should pay a little for it. What's your name, my man?"

"Never mind what it is."

"Are you ashamed of it?"

"Hampton!"

very forlorn, very despairing. "My fa-

She turned, and I, still supporting her, we mounted the steps of the ter-

self and faced me.

"Lord Luftdon and the Duke of Ar-

"Madam," said I, "they already know it."

"And why, then, have they left the duty of telling me to you? Where are they? Summon them at once!"

"They are gone!" I blustered out, my rage at the duke reviving.

"Gone!"

"Having won everything from Sir Geoffrey, they have left him alone in his death!" I retorted bitterly.

"Impossible!"

"I ordered them off the place," I said bluntly.

"You?" she flashed out imperiously.
"And who gave you the power to dismiss—my father's friends?"

"I heard what they said, being bid-

"And what did they say?"

"It concerned you, mistress."

"The Duke of Arcester," she promptly began, "is my betrothed husband.
I will hear no calumny against him."

"Madam," I said, "your engagement is broken."

"Broken!" she cried in amazement.

"The duke declared himself too poor to marry the penniless child of a disgraced man—his words, not mine, believe me."

She turned so white and reeled so that I caught her again. I even shook her while I cried roughly:

"You must not give way."

"It is a lie, a dastardly lie!" she panted out at last.

"It is God's truth," said I. "He repudiates you."

"No man could be so base," she persisted. "He swore that he loved me."

"I would it were otherwise, madam,
but he is gone, leaving that message
for you."

"And he made you his messenger?"

"I volunteered."

"Why? Why?"

"Because he is a low coward."

"And you stood by and let him insult me, your patron's daughter, your mistress?"

I told her what had happened in the spinney.

"In all that," she said in a certain strained way, "you acted as a loyal servitor of the house, and I thank you."

"I am to give orders to have his baggage sent to the inn at once," said I.

"And Lord Luftdon?"

"He came to your defense as if he were still the gentleman he had once been. But he goes hence with his friend. His baggage will also follow him."

"I will attend to that for them both,"
said Mistress Lucy, growing strangely and firmly resolved again, and even I could guess the tremendous constraint
she put upon herself. "Enough of Ar-

there was a great funeral, of course,
during which what little ready money
there was available was of necessity spent. The gentry came for miles around. Even Luftdon was there in the background, although Arcester had the decency to keep away. I was there, too, finding a place among the upper servants of the household. I happened to be immediately back of Mistress Lucy. From under her veil
she shot a forlorn, grateful look at me

HORSE SENSE.

The work horse should have six to ten pounds of hay in addition to the corn and carrot.

A stumbling horse is dangerous and is usually made so by bad shoeing. Go to an expert, intelligent shoer.

Nowadays farmers are alive to the fact that it requires strong horses to perform efficient work on the farm.

Different qualities of the same kind of grain and hay enter the balanced ration of the different experiment stations for horses.

There is solid satisfaction and encouragement for a man to do his best in driving a well mated team that responds to good horsemanship.

A properly conditioned draft horse, with its necessary education largely completed, is one of the most perfectly finished products of the farm.

Take pains to exercise the horses and harden them up before the real spring work begins. This is necessary if you wish to avoid delays and risks.

One of the best preventives of scratches in horses is to keep the feet clean. If mud is permitted to dry on the fetlocks irritation is likely to ensue.

FALL GARDEN WORK.

Cleaning Up and Care of the Soil Are Necessary.

All persons who are versed in the lore of good gardening practice the clearing up of their gardens in the fall of the year after hard freezing in order to get out of the way work which can then be better done than in the spring, when all is in a rush. In order to kill the eggs and cocoons of insects and fungous diseases war on the latter two enemies must be continuous if the garden is to be a success.

Rake up and burn all rubbish, such as the decayed tops of plants and the leaves from trees and bushes, and sweep the garden clean. This will kill many garden enemies, and you will not need to do it next spring. This is the time to make extra soil for future use.

If the soil in any part of your garden is giving out or you need some for next season's potting of house plants make a compost of one part of good mellow loam, one-half part each of well rotted horse manure and chopped up sods from the roadside, one-fifth its bulk of sand (if the base be limestone loam) or a dusting of powdered lime (if it be sandy loam) and a quart of bone flour to each bushel of the above mixture, all well mixed together and piled under cover over winter.

The soil in the beds in which it is not intended to plant bulbs for winter should be trenched—that is, piled in rows so as to present as much surface as possible to the action of the frost and the air during winter to absorb nitrogen and to make a medium for the action of the soil bacteria, which work in the humus in the soil and without which no soil is fertile.

The soil for the beds and borders in which spring blooming bulbs are to be grown should be deep and friable, piled with humus and enriched with well rotted horse manure, dug in deeply. It is best to dig the soil first and

RAISING WINTER LAYERS.

Careful Study of Breeds Essential to Success.

In order to raise winter layers one must know something about the characteristics of the different breeds, the laying periods of which vary, says a correspondent of the Country Gentleman. Some begin laying in five months, others in six, seven or eight months. When the egg laying characteristics of a particular breed of fowl are known it is easy to raise winter layers.

In the writer's experience with White Plymouth Rocks the time between hatching and the laying of the first egg has varied from five months and four days to seven months and thirteen days. Pullets usually lay a small number of eggs at first—about fifteen or twenty—then rest a few days or a week, after which they begin to lay again and continue for three or four months or more without stopping. By regulating the hatching of chicks according to these laying characteristics and by giving them proper care and attention a good supply of fresh eggs may be had during the winter months. A brief description of the writer's method of raising winter layers may be helpful.

Hens are used for incubating the eggs. Provided a hen wants to set any time after the middle of February she is put in a warm and protected place. For prospective winter layers it is well to hatch the chicks as early as March and April. With hens to brood the chicks and with a sunny exposure and protection from cold winds, they need little more attention in early than in later hatching.

No wet food is given young chicks until they are four to five weeks old. The mother hen is cooped, but the chicks are allowed free grass range. They

Dehorn the Calf.

Horns have no place on the farm. They are not wanted on the dairy cow now, as they are a dangerous appendage, and the time has gone by when the cow needs them as a defense against the attacks of wild animals. The fact is they are a nuisance, and the best way to get rid of them is to kill the embryo horn in the early life of the calf.

For some years I have used caustic potash to prevent the growth of horns on my calves, says a writer in the Southern Cultivator. The operation is a simple one and can be done by any careful person. Clip off the hair around the little horn from a spot about as large over as a quarter of a dollar; then wrap a stick of caustic potash in a piece of paper, exposing the tip of one end. This caution is to prevent burning the fingers. Apply the caustic to the horn, rubbing it slightly until it begins to look red, then grease around the horn to prevent the caustic from spreading and burning where not needed. For this reason care should be taken not to get much water on the horn for it burns wherever it runs.

and the air during winter to absorb nitrogen and to make a medium for the action of the soil bacteria, which work in the humus in the soil and without which no soil is fertile.

The soil for the beds and borders in which spring blooming bulbs are to be grown should be deep and friable, filled with humus and enriched with well rotted horse manure, dug in deeply. It is best to dig the soil first and then chop it with the rake to make it fine and mellow before raking. No commercial fertilizers need be used for outdoor bulbs unless the soil is new and lacks one or more of the primary soil contents, in which case one containing potash, phosphate or nitrogen may be used as needed. But there is nothing better for a loamy soil than stable manure.

When the soil in the bulb beds and borders has frozen solid it should be mulched with some good covering, such as leaves, straw or hay, to a depth of six inches. Strawy manure may also be used to advantage and this covered with brush to prevent the covering blowing off. This mulching should not be taken off until the hard frosts are past, as the alternate freezing and thawing and lifting the bulbs out of the ground will prevent their blooming.—Farm and Fireside.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Sarah Bernhardt will add Beau Brummel to her gallery of male characters this season. She will impersonate the English dandy in a new play which has been written for her by Maurice de Faramond.

Mme. Chaminade, whose name has been added to the French Legion of Honor, is said to be the first woman so honored because of her success as a musician and composer. Mme. Chaminade is in her fifty-second year and has devoted her life to music.

She retired from public life about a quarter of a century ago and practically has not appeared on the operatic or concert stage since then, except on occasions for charity or the like.

For prospective winter layers it is well to hatch the chicks as early as March and April. With hens to brood the chicks and with a sunny exposure and protection from cold winds, they need little more attention in early than in later hatching.

No wet food is given young chicks until they are four to five weeks old. The mother hen is cooped, but the chicks are allowed free grass range. They are fed regularly five times a day until they are about two months old, after that for two months or so four times a day, and from that time on three times a day until winter is over. The young chicks are kept free of vermin by simple methods, the perches and roosting places are carefully watched for chicken mites, and any indication of sickness is at once investigated.

After the chicks are three months old they are fed a wet mash in the morning and a grain mixture consisting of two parts of whole or cracked corn and one part each of wheat and oats for the remaining meals. The mash is composed of four parts by measure of bran and one each of middlings, cornmeal and mixed grains. Occasionally one measure of meat meal is added to the mash to furnish animal protein, though the meat meal is kept in hoppers in order that the young chickens may learn to balance their own ration. Since chickens possess individual tastes, it is better to let them balance their ration to suit themselves. The mash is usually wet down with the wastes from the table. Oyster shell and grit are always kept before the fowls in hoppers.

A dry scratching pen, free from drafts and well lighted, is provided for each pen of fowls. This is practically indispensable for winter layers in cold or moderate climates. Grain thrown in the litter will keep the fowls busy for hours. Exercise is very important for fowls that are kept to produce eggs during the winter months. Plenty of fresh water is also essential for laying hens. Fifty fowls cared for in this manner during the past four or five years have given a fairly uniform supply of winter eggs. As a rule the fifty fowls have consisted of from sixteen to twenty pullets, about the same number of one-year-old hens and a few two-year-olds. Careful records show that the pullets during the winter months lay about four times as many eggs as the hens. For profitable winter egg production it is advisable to have as many vigorous pullets as possible.

With pullets numbering only about one-third of the fifty fowls, the production of the writer's flock during the past four winters, regarding the winter months as December, January and February, has been as follows:

Winter of 1907-8, 1,032—average per month, 344; winter of 1908-9, 1,330—average per month, 446; winter of 1909-10, 1,258—average per month, 419; winter of 1910-11, 1,345—average per month, 448.

There are some really beautiful collars on sale in the shops than as if they had come straight from east. To be exact, they have from Paris, but they are none the less fascinating. right touch to the costume of silk or cotton, wool or linen.

They are made in odd, queer shapes and are made of a sort of gauze, like mummy cloth, only thinner. Some of them are made of chiffon. They are all heavily embroidered, with metallic threads and silk and wool, in rich shades of color.

The clever needlewoman could copy these collars and so get one at much less expense than the price asked for them ready made. They cost from $2 to $7.

She should get heavy cotton cloth, stretch it in embroidery frames and mark the shape of the collar and the design to be embroidered. The edge should be buttonholed in heavy thread in a straight outline. Here is one collar that might be copied: It is of deep mauve chiffon cloth, edged with buttonholing in a lighter shade of silk. It is decorated with a design of conventionalized daisies worked in old blue and old yellow silk and silver metal thread. This would look well on a blue gown.

Sometimes cuffs are made to match the collars. The cuffs in many cases are no more than little points that are fastened to the sleeve of the frock at the elbow or the wrist, but that do not go all the way around the arm or hand. One attractive set of this sort, with small cuffs that would just give a dashing touch of color to the sleeves of the dark dress with which they were worn, is of Egyptian cloth, embroidered heavily in brilliant green and a burnt shade of red. For wear with morning frocks nothing will be found neater and prettier than the jabot pictured.

Dotted white piquet is the material, and the shape, as you see, is of ham-mer outline.

Edging the jabot is a narrow hand-made tatting, and the arrangement of the velvet bow is simple and effective.

"Somebody turned 'em out—turned 'em out!" he shouted and swept profanely by. The gate of the kennel yard stood open. A familiar figure, running low, paused and then sprinted nimbly along the paddock fence. A white sweater was distinguishable for a moment on a stone wall, then it followed a pair of enchanted heels into oblivion.

Time had been passing swiftly, and the shadows were deepening. I retraced my steps toward the terrace, hearing the cries of pursued and pursuers growing fainter. I had not yet gained a position from which I could see Cecilia, when a man appeared some distance ahead of me, walking guardedly in one of the garden plots. He came uncertainly, pausing to glance about, yet evidently led toward the terrace by a definite purpose. All may be fair in love and war, but I confess to a feeling of pity for John Stewart Dick as I watched him slowly advancing to his fate. He was going boldly now, and I felt a sudden liking for him, nor can I believe that he was other than a manly fellow with sound brains and a good heart.

I reasoned as I marked his approach to the terrace that he had been loitering in the neighborhood, probably watching Cecilia and Pepperton, and when the architect retired he had assumed that the sixth man had spoken. The appearance of his former comrades of the inn had doubtless disturbed him as it had me; then, thanks to the resourceful Hezekiah, they had been routed, and the coast was clear.

I watched him draw nearer to Cecilia as I have watched deer go down to a lake to drink. He would speak now, I was confident of it, and I stole round to the side entrance and sent word to Wiggins to go to the drawing room and wait for me.

Miss Octavia and Pepperton still lingered over their teacups. The row made by the fugitives from her kennels had not, it seemed, penetrated to the library, and Miss Octavia bade me join the talk, which had to do, I remember, with some project for a national hall of fame that had incurred her characteristic displeasure. A ball of immortal rascals in pillories she thought far likelier to please the masses.

In fifteen minutes I saw Cecilia crossing the hall. She stopped where I could see her quite plainly and thrust her hand into the pocket of her coat. Out flashed the silver notebook. She made a swift notation with the pencil that now, I knew, wrote the fate of the sixth man.

PAIN NEARLY DROVE HIM MAD

Suffered Horribly Until He Turned To "Fruit-a-tives"

DRYSDALE, ONT., June 15th. 1913

"I am a general storekeeper at the above address, and on account of the great good I have experienced from using "Fruit-a-tives", I recommend them strongly to my customers. They were a great boon to me, I can tell you, for about two years ago, I was laid up in bed with vomiting and a terrific pain at the base of my skull. The pain nearly drove me mad. Doctors feared it would turn to inflammation of the brain but I took "Fruit-a-tives" steadily until I was cured. I have gained fifteen pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives" and I verily believe they saved me from a disastrous illness."

Old Time Football.

In the twelfth century London enjoyed football. Fitz-Stephen, clerk to Thomas a Becket, tells how after dinner the youths of the city would "address themselves" to football. These sportsmen were fastidious in their way. The scholars of each school had a ball peculiar to themselves, as had, indeed, most of the particular trades. The fathers of the players, too, were "as youthful as the youngest" for, "their natural heat seeming to be revived at the sight of so much agility," they sprang from their stands into the arena. In later days, too, the excitement of the game has been known to infect the spectators. Somebody wrote of a game in 1598: "These two men were killed by Ould Gunter. Gunter's sonnes and ye Gregories fell together by ye years at football. Ould Gunter drewe his dagger and broke boothe theire heads, and they died boothe within a fortnight after."

Lightning Shuns Women.

Statistics appear to show that men are more likely to be struck by lightning than women, more than two men being killed by it for every woman. But a London Journal points out that the man's occupation is more likely to take him into the open when lightning is about. It has been observed, however, that in a group equally composed of both sexes lightning seems to prefer the men, and we may theorize at pleasure as to whether it is the comparative height that does it or some protection afforded by the woman's dress or a difference in conductivity between the sexes. The fact that children are seldom killed by lightning supports to a certain extent the first of these theories.

Let Down the Blind.

A youngster had been to the theater, and upon his return his uncle asked him how he liked the play.

"Oh," he replied, "the play was all right, but I didn't see nearly all of it!" "Why, how did that happen?" asked his uncle.

"Because," answered the youngster, "the roller must have been broke, for the window blind fell down two or three times."—London Express.

His Idea of It.

"George Washington," read the small boy from his history, "was born Feb. 22, 1732, A. D."

"What does 'A. D.' stand for?" inquired the teacher.

The small boy pondered. "I don't exactly know," he hesitated. "After dark, I guess."—Exchange.

Can't Do Both.

teristic displeasure. A ball of immortal rascals in pillories she thought far likelier to please the masses.

In fifteen minutes I saw Cecilia crossing the hall. She stopped where I could see her quite plainly and thrust her hand into the pocket of her coat. Out flashed the silver notebook. She made a swift notation with the pencil that now, I knew, wrote the fate of the sixth man.

I went out and spoke to her and walked beside her to the drawing room door, where Hartley Wiggins was waiting.

Miss Octavia had risen when I returned to the library, and it was time to dress for dinner.

"Just a moment, Miss Hollister. Something of great interest is about to occur." And I made excuses for detaining her for perhaps five minutes, not more.

"You have never yet deceived me, Arnold Ames, and such is my confidence in you that if you tell me that something interesting will soon occur I have no reason to doubt you. It is worth remembering, however, that fowl is not improved by prolonged roasting."

I heard Wiggins laugh in the hall, and Miss Octavia raised her head. Then Cecilia came into the room and walked directly to her aunt.

"Aunt Octavia, here is the little silver notebook you gave me in Paris. I have just written Mr. Wiggins' name in it, and as I have no further use for the book, I return it with my love and thanks."

Without a word Miss Octavia turned to the wall and pressed the button twice.

"William," she said as the butler appeared, "you may serve Oriana '97, and be careful not to freeze it to death; and the hour for dinner is changed to 8. Arnold, you may yourself drive to Gooseberry bungalow for my brother and niece. They dine with me tonight."

Hezekiah and I built our bungalow in the orchard where on that October afternoon I found her munching a red apple on the stone wall. She is the most scrupulous of housewives and only now took me to task for scattering the hearth with fragments of the notes from which this narrative has been written. She has just been reading these last pages with meditative brown eyes and not without occasionally reaching for the pen and retouching some sentence in which, she says, soot from my chimney doctoring days has clogged the ink. Cecilia and Wiggins live at Hopedale across the fields. Miss Octavia insisted on this, for the reason that the sword of Hartley's great-grandfather, found in the chest under the old house, gives him inalienable rights to the premises. Miss Octavia and her brother Bassford are traveling abroad and enjoying those mild adventures to which they are both temperamentally inclined.

My name is joined to Pepperton's on his office door. Pepperton proposed this arrangement, with so many assurances of faith in me that I could not refuse him; but I knew well enough that Miss Octavia had first put it into his head. So while I have called myself a chimney doctor in these pages, I am again an architect.

"You ought to say something more about the Asolando," Hezekiah has just murmured at my shoulder. "Everybody will ask whether we ever went back there."

"William," she said, "you may serve Oriana '97."

"Of course we go back there. Hezekiah, every time you come to town and can get hold of me."

"You'd better explain that Aunt Octavia started the tea room and still owns it and makes money out of it, though she rarely goes there, but sends Freda, the maid, to collect the profits. And it won't do any harm to say that when she met you there that day she decided at once that you would be a proper husband for me. Any one who reads your book will want to know that."

Hezekiah is always right. So here endeth the chronicle.

THE END.

Automobile Runs.

One-tenth of the automobiles of this country are owned in New York.

In Washington an automobile cannot pass a street car headed in the same direction while passengers are getting on or off. It must stop.

Automobile tires that are filled with puncture repairing solutions have been provided by an inventor with a quick repair boot for preventing loss of the solution through large cuts.

Flower and Tree.

Olive trees yield a full crop only every alternate year.

Dying plants can sometimes be revived by pouring a teaspoonful of castor oil about the roots.

By judicious grafting upon trees of Chinese origin Spanish fruit growers have been able to produce trees which bear oranges of better quality and which are productive for 300 years.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was gownned in cream duchess, with pearl trimming, and carried white roses. Her tulle veil was draped in cap effect and caught up with orange blossoms. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Forrester, who wore yellow silk, trimmed with plaited chiffon and sable fur, and the groom was supported by his brother, J. B. Allison, Napanee. The ushers were W. P. Detlor and R. Roblin. The wedding march was rendered by Miss M. T. Keller, Toronto. During the signing of the register, Mrs. (Prof.) Robertson, Toronto, sang, "A Psalm of Love." The groom's gift to the bride was a fur coat and muff, to the bridesmaid, a cameo ring, to the groomsman, a tie pin, to the organist, gold pins, and to the ushers, cuff-links. After a reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allison left for Camden, New York, and other points. The bride travelled in a suit of brown bedford cord, with plush hat to match.
